Risk Solutions International and Parsons Announce Strategic Alliance

NEW YORK, NY (December 1, 2006) – Risk Solutions International LLC, the premier operational risk management solutions company, and Parsons, one of the largest 100% employee-owned engineering and construction companies in the United States, today announced a strategic partnership. The companies will provide solutions to help government entities and businesses understand and effectively respond to risks that threaten their critical operating functions.

The alliance was formed to address the complex and threatening risks facing organizations today and the criticality of maintaining operations through the life of a crisis. Parsons' ability to deliver innovative solutions to both its government and industrial clients will now include helping them look closely at their internal operations and processes through the services of Risk Solutions International.

"Parsons' partnership with Risk Solutions International will enable our clients to be better prepared in the event of a disaster," commented Brian O'Kane, Parsons Vice President. "Through Risk Solutions International's suite of operational risk management solutions, our clients will have the opportunity to have their as-builts available for immediate rebuild versus a potential delay of six to eight weeks."

In line with Parsons' strategy to ensure its clients' long-term viability, Risk Solutions International understands how today's risks may impact the continuity of an organization's core business operation and financial stability and therefore offers a full range of business continuity, emergency response, compliance, crisis management, investigative services, security, and supply chain management services.

Parsons and Risk Solutions International will work with organizations to create strategies that mitigate operational risks so that their business operates uninterrupted at the same profit levels before, during, and after a crisis strikes. The current corporate governance environment suggests that organizations—even privately held companies and governmental agencies—should be actively involved in mitigating the impact of foreseeable emergencies or crises prior to their occurrence and ensuring the resiliency of their businesses. The plans they have in place may determine the continued viability of their business.

"Federal and state/local governments, pharmaceutical and biotechnology firms, petroleum and chemical manufacturers, and utility agencies need help in understanding and managing the operational risks they face to ensure the continuity of their operations when faced with a crisis," said Duane A. Lohn, Executive Vice President, Client Development, Business Strategy and Alliances, Risk Solutions International. "New regulations have set a higher standard for operational resiliency at organizations and mandate that senior management be involved strategically and tactically in the event of disruptions. We are thrilled to be working on these issues with Parsons and its clients."
